Peking Says 30 Soviet Soldiers Wound Numerous Chinese in Border Incursion

TOKYO, May 11 (AP)—China charged today that 30 Soviet soldiers intruded four kilometers into northeast China on Tuesday, shot and wounded a number of Chinese and roughed up 14 others. It was only due to the restraint of the Chinese side that the incident did not develop into an armed conflict, the official Chinese news agen-It said Deputy Foreign Minister Yu Chan had handed a strong note of protest to Soviet Ambassador V. S. Tolstikov in Peking. The agency said the note declared that the atrocities of the Soviet troops constituted an organized military provocation against China occurring at a time when the Chinese-Soviet boundary negotiations had just resumed. They were a serious infringment on China's sovereignty and territorial integrity as well as a grave, calculated step to. create tension on the border and vitiate relations hetween the two countries, the note said. It said that a Soviet helicopter penetrated four kilometers over the Ussuri River into Chinas Heilungkiang province, 18 military boats intruded into Chinese waters in the same region, and 30 Soviet soldiers then landed on the Chinese bank of the river.

They chased and tried to round up Chinese inhabitants, shooting continually and wounding a number of them. Penetrating four kilometers into Chinese territory, they seized 14 Chinese inhahitants and dragged them all the way to the river bank, giving them kicks and blows. Under the repeated protests of the Chinese inhabitants, the Soviet troops finally released them, it added.

It was along the Ussuri where Chinese and Soviet troops clashed in March. 1969, over the ownership of Chengpaotao, a small island in the river. Japanese reports quoted Chinese officials as saying 86 Chinese and more than 240 Russians were killed or wounded

In December, 1975, China released three Soviet erewmen and their helicopter, detained for 21 months after being seized in China's northwest Sinkiang province. The Russians had claimed that the helicopter was on a mercy mission hut went astray and made an emergency landing because of bad weather.

Last July, a Japanese report from Peking said Chinese border militia had killed one of six armed Soviet spies who invaded Sinkiang, another of the Russians committed suicide and the rest fled hack into Soviet Without giving details, the Chinese also have accused the Russians of large numbers of provocations along the long border.

Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Leonid Hyichev, chief Soviet negoriator in border talks with China, arrived back in Peking last month after a 14-month absence. No major progress has been reported in the talks on disputed border areas, begun more than eight years ago.

Chinas protest note on Tuesday's incident demanded a Soviet apology, punishment for the Russians involved and a guarantee of no future similar incidents. Otherwise, the Soviet side must bear full responsibility for the consequences, it said.

Senate Passes Overseas Tax Revision Bill; Measure Sent to Conference With House

WASHINGTON, May 11 (IHT)-Legislation to completely revise the taxation of Americans abroad was passed by the Senate today and sent to conference with the House.

The measure would defer the foreign income provisions of the 1976 Tax Reform Act for income earned in 1977. It would wipe out the 1976 provisions entirely for income earned in 1978 and thereafter and replaced them with a plan developed by Sen. mind by his suggestion was some-what obscure. The degree of con-trol by Jordan and Egypt, the speed of Israeli withdrawal from the two occupied territories, and the role of their Palestinian citizens' councils, were all left open in his comments.

The proposal for a Jordanian and Egyptian role — a new idea, at least in public — was evidently designed to calm Israeli fears of a Palestinian state. But Mr. Sadat, in an interview, insisted that the Palestinians could not be ignored, that they were "the core and the crux of "The most important thing," he said, "is that they should after five years determine their future."

Although Mr. Sadat evidently hoped to appeal to the Israeli government, analysts saw no immediate reason to believe that the suggestion would end Israel's resistance to Egypt's general approach. The government of Prime Minister Menachem Begin has so far stood fast against any commitment to withdraw from the West Bank of the Jordan River and Gaza.

New Atmosphere

Mr. Sadat, speaking on the eve of Israel's 30th-anniversary celebration, said that this anniversary would be "completely different from those of the past because of the peace initiative be started last November.

"Every year when Israel used to celebrate," he said, "it used to be under the tension of the conflict with all its bitterness, hatred, violence." Now, he said in a reference to the 1973 Middle East war. the atmosphere has been transformed by his call to "let the October war be the last war."

diplomatic sources. Despite the difficulties this poliey is encountering it is unlikely to be reversed. French government sources say, even though Mr. Giscard d'Estateg is risking criticism at home for French casualties and UN vacillations.

In Lebanon, France - whose 1.500-man contingent is the main contingent of the UN Interim Force. — faces a dilemma. On the one hand, France does not want to serve as a screen for a prolonged Israeli occupation in south Lebanon, and so it wants to help bring about as Israeli pullout by curtailing the Palestinian guerrilla activi-ties in south Lebanon.

On the other hand, French diplo-

LN Ambiguity

In this dilemma, France is handicapped by the ambiguity in UN Se-curity Council Resolution 425 to establish a peace-keeping force in south Lebanon. Two conflicting interpretations exist of the U.S.-drafted resolution. The text calls for Israei to withdraw "forthwith" its troops from Lebanon and also charges the UN force with helping Lebanon restore its "effective guthority." This latter phrase, dipsins of Mr. Moro. Premier Giulio ocrat leaders today to discuss the aftermath of Mr. Moro's death, but lomatic sources say, was changed at he refused to say whether he would the last minute, dropping direct or-call a summit meeting with leaders ders to the UN force to oppose Palestinian guerrillas.

Western diplomats are eager to avoid returning to the Securi-Council for clearer instructions. new debate probably would founder on objections from the So-viet Union, which would be influenced by Arah delagates pointing to previous UN resolutions endorsing the Palestinians' right to struggle for their rights by any means at their disposal.

Probable Reoccupation

Foreign Minister Louis de Guirngaud explained today that restoring Lebanese authority was going to take a long time — in fact, until the shattered Lebanese Army could be rebuilt. Meantime, he said, "it could well be in the interest of the Palestinians to cooperate with the UN forces because a failure of the UN in its mission would lead to the withdrawal of UN forces and the probable reoccupation of the area by Israel." In other words, French strategists are hoping that the tricky passage can be regotiated by diplomacy, not force.

A failure of the UN mission would also be a blow to Mr. Giscard d'Estaing. At home, it would stiffen criticism both from the So-cialist opposition and from his Gaullist allies that he committed French troops hastily and - it is an open secret in Paris - with scant encouragement from the Foreign Ministry or the French Embassy in Beirut.

In a wider perspective, France— which is taking part in a UN Secur-ity Council force for the first time nce the Congo operation in 1960 has strong motives for wanting success. Specifically, French sources as say that this operation could be the prototype for similar UN peace-keeping efforts on Israel's borders in the future. French performance in the buffer zone being created in Lebanon between the PLO and Israel appears intended to lemonstrate French capability to take part in any similar security zones that eventually would form part of an overall Arab-Israeli settlement, these sources say.

Long-Term Presence

France, a permanent Security Council member, could play a ma-jor role in any such Arab-Israeli security guarantees, thus securing a long-term French presence in the Middle East.

France's chances of playing a central role in any Mideast security arrangements hinge, however, not talks with East German leaders.

only on France's military muscle but on its credibility and acceptability to both Israelis and Arabs. French-Israeli relations have steadily declined since 1967, perhaps hitting bottom when France's foreign minister became the first major Western diplomat to meet with PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat. However, even the late Gen. Charles de Gaulle, an early critic of what he described as Israeli expansionism, maintained that France would be ready to take some responsibility in any final system of security guarantees. A French role would be welcomed by the United States, diplomats say.

Convinced that enduring French influence in the Middle East depends on France's ability to be present on the ground there, Mr. Giscard d'Estaing also intervened in the Lebanese crisis in keeping with his policy, already displayed in African states such as Chad. Mauritania and the Congo, of French readiness to come to the defense of moderate friendly govern-ments with past links to France.

Softer on Israel

An important factor in the French role in south Lebanon ap-pears to be Mr. Giscard d Estaing's desire to mend fences with Israel. A restoration of Israeli confidence in France would be indispensable to a French role on Israel's border. Domestically, French government statements have reflected a noticeably softer lone on Israel since the months before the recent elections.

The France of Mr. Giscard d'Estaing has a lot riding on the UN force in Lebanon, and many diplomats here worry that the venture could come to grief in new Israeli-Palestinian violence. Unhappy about Israel's slowness in with drawing behind its borders. French diplomats appear even more wor-ried that the PLO, feeling political pressures on it in Lebanon as a whole, may lose its initial desire to cooperate with the UN mission.

Change of Positions

BEIRUT, May II (UPI)-French UN troops have pulled out of their embattled positions north of the guerrilla-controlled port of Tyre in southwest Lebanon, handing over the posts to Senegalese

The redeployment and strengthening of some positions was an at-tempt to head off a repeat of last week's clash between the French and Palestinian guerrillas.

The redeployment coincided with negotiations hetween. Norwegian UN troops and Pales-tinians in the southeast, the scene of a clash Tuesday. UN sources said that the talks appeared to have gone well.

French soldiers handed over their positions north of Tyre — the area of greatest friction with the guerrillas - to the Senegalese. The French took over Senegalese positions to the east and south of the port town.

Residents said that the French also mounted a new outpost near the Mediterranean coast south of Tyre, overlooking the heavily armed Palestinian refugee camp of Rashidiyeh.

"We are in a beautiful spot," quipped a French major. "I think we're going to have a nice seaside

Western diplomats feared that the vacation might not last long and that Palestinian guerrillas might again challenge UN forces if they do not make good on what the Palestinians see as the UN's main job - ensuring a speedy Israeli withdrawal from the south.

Fueling tension around Tyre was the fact that Israel did not occupy that area during its invasion. The Palestinians have said that the UN troops belong only in positions va-cated by the Israelis.

The latest compilation of statistical comparisons by the 24-nation Organization of Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) said that the Swedes, despite all their recent economic troubles, have by far the highest per capita income in the world — $9,030 per year per person. Switzerland is next with $ 8,870 and the United States is now third with $7,910. Then comes Norway with $7,770 and Denmark with $7,590.

The OECD — comprising the Midwest Mass Murderer Resists Subliminal Message to Give Up

CHICAGO, May 11 1UPI)—A controversial and previously banned mind-control technique—the subliminal message—was used by a television station during recent newscasts in an attempt to communicate with a suspected mass murderer, the Chicago Sun-

Times reported today.

The station was in the Midwest, but neither it not its location have been named because the murder suspect remains at large. "Contact the chief" was the message.

During two newscasts concerning the murders, two or three frames of film containing the message were interspersed among frames about the murders, a news executive at the station told the Sun-Times.

A subliminal message appears on the screen for only a fraction of a second — too briefly to be perceived by the eye but long enough to implant a suggestion in the miod of the viewer.

"We tried to play a game," said the police chief, "We tried to get

Allegedly Sold Places in Freshman Class

Admission Probed at N.Y. Medical School

By Richard D. Lyons

NEW YORK, May 11 (NYT)-Federal and local officials have begun separate investigations into allegations by doctors formerly on the staff of the New York Medical College that places in the insutution's freshman classes have been sold for as much as $100.000 each.

The investigations are under way by officials of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare in Washington, and the office of Carl Vergari, the district attorney of Westchester Couoty, where the col-lege is located.

The federal investigation also will include seven other medical schools in Pennsylvania, Massachu-setts, Illinois and California which have also been accused of basing admission on factors other than

Such charges come at a time of increasing scrutiny of the admissions practices of graduate schools. This stems in part from the conviction of two Philadelphia politicians, who were charged with accepting bribes to obtain admissions, and a lawsuit in Chicago that charged that a medical school there bad col-lected more than $10 million from the parents of incoming freshmen in four years.

Ex-Executives Seen Behind Ford Lawsuit

DETROIT, May 11 (UPI)—At-torneys for the firm that filed a $50-million lawsuit against Ford Motor Co. board chairman Henry Ford 2d, accusing him of wasting company money and taking a $750,000 kickback, reportedly said $750,000 kickback, reportedly said that the prime allegations were made by former company executives who were "fired and humiliated" by Mr. Ford.

Attorneys of the New York law firm of Saxe. Bacon & Bolan, which filed the suit against Mr. Ford two weeks ago, said that the informa-tion in the suit came from at least five former executives, who were in positions to know about company finances and contracts," according to a story in the Detroit Free Press today. They did not name the Ford executives. The allegations have prompted inquiries from the Securities and change Commission and the U.S. Internal Revenue Service into the company's financial operations. Mr. Ford last week denounced the allegations.

The suit alleges that Mr. Ford took a $750,000 kickback from Canteen Corp. for an exclusive vending contract with Ford Motor Co; that the company improperly paid for and furnished Mr. Ford's personal residences in New York and England, that Mr. Ford gave exclusive contracts to family mem-bers to furnish and decorate corpo-rate offices, that Mr. Ford was overpaid and had total control over the company's board of directors.

Called Disgusting

"I never personally saw money change hands to influence an admission, but we all knew what was going on," she said, adding that she considered the practice "disgusting because less qualified students were gaining admission."

Other physicians at the college who have made the same allega-uons include Dr. Miles Galin and Dr. Kenneth Barasch. Recently the group retained former New York Mayor John Lindsay, a lawyer now in private practice, to press its case of misconduct before the state's attorney general, Louis Lefkowitz. The charges include reports of payoffs to former officials of the medical school that range from $1,500 to $100,000.

Dr. Thomas Cottrell, an associ-ate dean at New York Medical Col-lege and formerly in charge of admissions, denied that the institu-tion had ever taken either unquali-fied applicants or students in whose name contributions had been made to the school.

But did you know that when KLM services an aircraft, cleanliness is almost a religion?

Example: In the KLM "clean room" as a technician services part of a 747's flight guidance system, giant filters eliminate dust particles smaller than a micron!

Among experienced travelers, the word "clean" is virtually synonymous with "Dutch." Small wonder, then, that very few other airlines have created a regimen of maintenance as demanding as that of KLM.

Take our "clean room" laboratories. There, even routine maintenance on one of the three flight guidance systems in every KLM 747 is carried out under conditions more associated with medicine than with airlines.

But a healthy regard for cleanliness is only one facet of a meticulous attention to detail characteristic of Dutch people. And KLM people.

One example springs to mind. Aircraft manufacturers suggest their own procedures for the training of airline maintenance personnel.

But, being thoroughly Dutch, KLM has developed its own rigorous maintenance training. Year round. For everything from "line maintenance" between flights to the disassembly and overhaul of engines.

How well do we do it? Suffice to say that we do it so well that 14 other airlines entrust the maintenance and overhaul of their aircraft to us.

A fact that should go a long way toward recommending KLM to you.

Keeping Secrets Secret

John Stockwell, for 12 years a Central Intelligence Agency operative, says in his new book (and on CBS's "60 Minutes") that the ClA bungled its 1975 Angolian operation and misled Congress about it. The CIA director of that period, William Colby, who's also got a book coming out, and others deny the several charges. Who's right?

Allegations of bungling about an operation that failed anyway, when Congress pulled the plug, aren't surprising. Allegations of deceiving Congress on some details, while "muzzling" it by informing it confidentially and of others, are more intriguing. But who knows? A conclusive answer would prohably require a wider perspective than an ex-operator's, and a more unsparing critique than an ex-director's. The Senate Intelligence Committee is investigating - secretly. The CIA books roll on.

What interests us more today is the way Mr. Stockwell entered the fray. Twelve years' exposure to CIA "corruption and misman-3.) agement," he explains, led him to break the secrecy oath he'd signed "as a young person" and to divulge secrets. If the CIA had "kept its act so clean that it was totally above 12 reproach," it would not have had to be "kept honest by ... public exposure." Courageous whistle-blower? Self-indulgent security violator? We lack the basis to judge Mr. Stockwell's psychology and character.

The are troubled by his procedure. He signed an after Stockwell's psychology and character. But we oath, accepted one covert assignment after another, and hroke a trust. One does not have to claim that the secrets he divulges are of the utmost significance to question the successive examples of individual whistleblowing, some years after the fact, when the CIA has already heen put through the wringer, when many reforms have already been instituted and others are being proposed, and when it is far too late, in any case, to influence the events being disclosed.

The ClA is testing, in the Snepp case, whether the courts will uphold the agency's secrecy oath, which requires employees to clear manuscripts prior to publication. Regardless, we don't much like oaths as enforcers. They are not statutes, after all, but merely conditions of employment. Anyway. the CIA oath goes too far: It lets CIA pass on all material gathered during employment, whether or not it's classified or important, whether or not disclosure would help the country or hurt the agency.

Much better, we think, is William Colby's proposal to end all existing restraints in favor of a simple new law. It would punish an exemployee's disclosure of intelligence sources ond methods "vulnerable to termination or frustration by a foreign power if disclosed." There would be no agency censorship, no prior restraint, no injunctions, no bar on whistle-blowing, no wholesale muzzling. The idea of the law would be to keep an irreducible minimum of legitimate secrets secret. On that ground and perhaps only on that ground, practically everyone could stand.

The potential is staggering and so is the fact that the higgest hindrance in bringing this about is our government.

Like shale oil, coal-derived oil and other projects with the potential to ease the nation's petroleum shortages, nothing significant will happen in the enhanced oil recovery program until the impasse over regulated prices is faced. Oilmen have to be assured that oil so produced can be sold at prices hased on costs, not bureaucratic whim.

Short of that, it is entirely possible the great American industrial machinge will grind to a halt while literally floating on an ocean of hard-to-recover oil.

President Carter, the same fellow who keeps hadgering us about our inflationary lifestyles, is pushing for an expansion of his White House staff — and if Congress goes along with his request, it's going to mean the taxpayers will foot the hill again.

Our penny-pinching chief executive is also concerned about Mrs. Carter and Mrs. Mondale and is asking that both their staffs be hoosted considerably.

Trade Deficits

Deficits continue to dominate the U.S. economy. The national trade deficit continues to worsen. In Washington, a major fight is developing on whether an income tax cut should be delayed in order to reduce an expected deficit in federal spending next year.

The March trade deficit was estimated at $2.8 billion, compared to a deficit of $1.9 billion in March, 1977. That many dollars in effect left the country to pile up in hank accounts in foreign nations which already have a surplus of dollars. It is the prime reason for the decline in the value of the dollar abroad and the resulting increase in costs for foreign goods purchased here. Thus the trade deficit also contributed to the inflation rate of the U.S. economy.

The miscalculation helps to explain the Israelis' early offer to return all the Sinai to Egypt. Seeing

The reasons are practical ones. A separate peace with Egypt would make it easier for Israel to remain

An Analysis

of 'Coercive

Diplomacy'

By Stephen S. Rosenfeld

WASHINGTON—After the Arab oil embargo, people talked briefly of using force to deter or put an end to similar non-military threats to U.S. well-being. The talk was inconclusive, if was widely considered indiscreet, if not provocative, and the Carter admin.

So it is of more than passing in-terest to come across a detailed and unblinking analysis of the circum-stances in which the United States might find the need, sanction and means to protect its Third World interests with force. It is in "Mili-tary Implications of a Possible World Order Crisis in the 1980s," a study prepared for the Air Force by Guy Panker of the Rand Corpora-tion in Santa Monica. from in Santa Monica.

Few people will be surprised to find a defense inellectual arguing in an Air Force report that situations requiring force will arise in the next decader, that the Air Force with land-based airplanes is better suited than the Navy with carrier-based implanes.

based simplenes to conduct a mod-ern version of gunboat diplomacy, or that the Air Force should think or that the Arr Force should think more concretely about adding "coercive diplomacy" to the range of missions assigned to its tactical air units. That is part of a continuing argument over the roles and budgets of the separate services. The Newy, too, claims the mission of projecting nower selects. of projecting power ashore ...

What is more interesting than What is more interesting than where Pauker ends up, however, is the way he gets there. His analysis is unusual in grappling, coldly and unsentimentally, with the United States's complex, confusing and changing relations with the Third World, Various thinkers and men of good will have offered scenarious and policy prescriptions designed to reduce the possibility of Third World disorder and First World-Third World conflict. Pauker turns all that around. er turns all that around.

He sees a sharpening confronta-tion over the division of the world product between the industrial de-mocracies and the Third World, or between North and South. It is not, says Pauker, a temporary clash produced by the oil-price increases but a deeper conflict, "the present stage of the political mobilization of the Third World, following several centuries of Western dominance," Pauker believes, furthermore, that people in the U.S. are not yet ready, though they may someday be, to yield their accumulated wealth and privilege or to negotiate with the South from other than a position of strength. His advice for the "transition" period is to "pre-pare for harsh relations." In that spirit he weighs "coercive diplomacy" to, say, ensure access to vital resources or to protect embattled investments abroad.

In a second category of contingencies. Pauker suggets that existing mechanisms of global planning and management are simply not up to handling the turbulence engendered by population growth strain on resources, environmental degradation, obsolete patterns of administration and decision-making, and all the rest. He anticipates nots, mass migrations, water diversions, poaching in coastal ocean zones, deep-sea grabs, various local slides into chaos — for which the United States should have an option to act. It does little good simply to dismiss Pauker, and the people who think like him, as cynics, or as ralightened policy toward the poor and/or non-white peoples of thousand/or non-white peoples of thousand/or neo-imperialistic musels flexing.

It makes more sense, I think, 40 recognize that Pauker is dealing with elements of the real world that too few other people are ready to look in the eye Pressures on U.S. interests are bound to tighten. The international system, such as it is, is buckling. As with any projection into the future, one can argue with this or that assumption. But one cannot argue with the contention that the post-war world that we have come to know (and largely run) is breaking up and that the world emerging to take its place is demanding and strange.

Whether our frustration in coping with it leads, with Panker, to a reliance on force or to new lorms of accommodation is the question of the age — one, it must be said, that the administration and most of the rest of us have barely begun to ask. At least for defining sharply one al-ternative to a wiser policy, Pauker deserves praise.

The other centrist politician to join the government is a defector from the Center Union party founded by the late Mr. Papandre-ou, but which has fallen apart since the restoration of democracy here.

The whole maneuver was designed to give Mr. Caramanlis a broader-based image to counteract the threat of the left, particularly the Panhellenic Socialist Movement

PASOK doubled its vote in the elections last fall, replacing the old Center Union as the main opposirion party. Party Hardliners Resist Change

Spain's Socialists May Shed Marxism

MADRID, May 11 (Reuters)—A controversy arose within Spain's main Socialist party today over a proposal by its secretary-general, Felipe Gonzalez, to drop the party's Marxist label.

The proposal fellowed a decision by the Communist party to drop Leninism and its connotation of violent revolution. Mr. Gonzalez said in Barcelona three days ago that he would pro-pose at his party's oext congress that it sould drop the Marxist label because "even Marx would not be happy with this adjective today." This change, like that of the Communists, apparently was aimed at drawing votes away from the center-right party of Premier Adolfo Suarez in municipal elections expected to be held this year.

Hostile Reaction

But the hostile reaction from members of the Socialist party indi-cated that Mr. Gonzalez will find it difficult to change the party's Marxist image. Mr. Gonzalez today sought to calm dissatisfied party nearbors by declaring in the party newspaper:
"It is not true that I consider myself a social democrat."

Noting that the word "Marxist" was introduced into the Spanish Socialist political manifesto only in 1976, he said it was redundant for a party which considered itself Marxist to have to declare itself as such. But he added: "It is not true that the party wishes to get rid of its Marxist tradition." Alfonso Guerra, the party's chief theoretician. announced: "The Spanish Socialist Workers party (PSOE) continues to adhere to the

Mr. Gonzalez's desire to shed the Marxist symbol was apparently aimed at attracting the large Spanish middle class which gained affluence during the 40-year rule of Franco and is frightened of Marxist It was largely the middle class vote that insured victory for Mr. Suarez.

Black Magic

He believed in black magic and practiced it on his enemies. When living in Paris in the 1890s, he was seized with an obsession that his former disciple, the Polish dramatist. Przybyszewski, had focused a long-range cannon on him and was at any moment going to open fire from Berlin. His life was an inces-sant hell, but it contained no dull moments. He died a recluse in the Swedish capital in 1912, never hav-ing received the Nobel Prize, which he would have rejected. His last public statement was that he want-ed the anti-Nobel Prize. Thousands attended his funeral.

Impossible as it seems to summa rize such a chameleon tempera-ment, his British hiographer, F.L. Lucas, has aptly suggested him hy quoting Dryden on Rochester: A man so various, that he unstable, writing on innumerable matters and in every form. Plays, novels, philosophical essays and even cookbooks flowed from his torrential pen. Bernard Shaw, O'Neill and O'Casey beheved him the foremost dramatist of the century and Ibsen saw him as his heir. An Oxford professor recently puhlished a symposium of French opinion on his work. In France he had many admirers, including Zola and Jules Lemaitre, but he has had few followers.

In literature he was similarly

Enquist, in seeking to dramatize him, has selected an incident that reveals many of his traits; his irascibility, self-doubts, mad jealousy and fierce misogamy. He married three times and from these dreadful experiences he fashioned some of PARIS, May II (IHT)—Arthur Taylor thought it was about time that jazz musicians be given a chance to express themselves ver-bally in depth and that only another musician could draw them out. When he finally screwed-up courage to ask Miles Davis, with whom he was playing drums, for an interview, Miles only answered: "Why?"

On the defensive, unable to think of anything better. Taylor said. "For the money." that was an answer Miles could understand. He smiled slyly and said, "Okay. Just don't sell it cheap."

It turned out that AT, as he is known, couldn't sell it at all. The manuscript of "Notes and Tones," 27 "musician-to-musician" interviews, was rejected by publisher after publisher in New York.

One bright spring afternoon ear-lier this month, he sat in the Cafe Flore and said: "The thing that surprised me was that not one of them offered a reason. Nobody said, 'Jazz doesn't sell' or whatever they say. They all just said 'no.' I was pretty depressed there for a while." He decided to publish the book himself.

AT has lived in Europe for over a decade. He has played and record-ed with Thelonious Monk. Sonny Rollins, John Coltrane, Johnny Griffin, Miles Davis and so on.

Creative Processes

His "Notes and Tones" is a hihle for anyone who considers himself serious about jazz. It does for jazz what the Paris Review series, "Writers at Work," did for creative writing: It reveals the processes involved as well as the people.

There are faults, however, All the interviewees are hlack, for one, AT explains, "I asked Gerry Mulligan and Stan Getz for interviews, but they both turned me down cold, and I just didn't bave the heart to go on asking and being turned down." For another, except for Don Cherry and Ornette Coleman, they all belong to pre-free, Broad-way song-form schools. To this crit-icism, AT responds that he has another 125 interviews on tape. "1

Some of his questions are redun-dant or awkwardly placed and there are the typos to be expected from an amateur editor, but these are more than compensated for by the book's uniqueness, honesty and

Galway Wants to Be Showplace for Arts and Theater

By Roy Reed

GALWAY, Ireland, May II (NYT)—Ireland's national Gaelic theater here, an early showplace for such luminaries as Siobhan McKenna and Micheal MacLiammoir, is celebrating its 50th anniversary. The anniversary coincides with a revival of the arts in Galway, a place once considered a cultural oasis of western Ireland.

Galway had its first arts festival last month, when some 2,000 people visited a rundown building housing a new arts center to see etchings by Irish artists, watch a movie by an Irisb film company and hear music by frish musicians.

Another theater, the two-year-old professional English-language Druid, is drawing lunchtime crowds to a cramped old building to see "The Proposal" by Chekhov. The Taibhdhearc, the Gaelic theater, is in a spruced-up, remodeled home two minutes from the rocky shore of Galway Bay, and is producing the first grand opera in Gaelic, a translation of Mozart's "Cosi Fan Tutte."

"Irish music is probably healthi-er in Galway than in any other

U.S. Painting Expected to Set Record Price

NEW YORK, May II (UPI)-One of America's favorite paintings, George Caleb Bingham's
"The Jolly Flatboatmen," will be sold at auction in Los Angeles June 6 and is expected to set a record price for an American painting, it was announced.

A spokesman for the Sotheby Parke Bernet auction galleries said that the painting of Mississippi boutmen cavorting atop their raft as it drifts down the river has been consigned to Sotheby's Los Angeles gallery hy an unidentified Califor-town in the country," said Richard Byrne, a director of the until the early 1960s, when Byrne and several other young people nounced "tiveyark").

The town is hearing much more than Mozart. Several pubs regular-ly have live music, much of it from that activity a folk club was Ireland and sung in either Gaelic or English. "The pub is our big competition in this country." Byrne said. "The King's Head across the street has live music every night. And it's free.

The festival featured two Galway ture was an exhibition of etchings produced principally by students of Laura Vecchi, an Italian teaching at Galway University.

The artistic renewal bere is sparked in large part by young people, especially students and young teachers at the university. They have revived a film society and signed up 350 new members. One of the highlights of the festival was a new movie called "Pottin" by Bob Quinn, a well-known director from western Ireland.

The festival was conceived by a group of young people who mei last fall in a community-radio ex-periment using a local hroadcasting hand turned over to them for a week by the national radio. The people brought together by the ex-periment found they shared artistic interests, so they set to work to establish an arts center and produce a festival. The center opened shortly before the festival started early last

Oliver Jennings, a 25-year-old graduate student who organized the festival, believes that some of the new interest is the result of population growth in Ireland over the last 10 years. There has been a surge of business expansion, notably in the support industry for oil exploration off the western coast. Thousands of people have moved into the area, nia collector whose family has owned it for three generations.

Bayer's Pre-Tax Net Off 19.4% in Quarter

STUTTGART, May 11 (AP-DJ)—Daimler-Benz parent-company net profit rose 13.5 percent last year to 445 million Deutsche marks from 392 million DM in 1976, management board chairman Joachim

agement board chairman Joachim Zahn said today.

Sales of the domesuc group climbed 9.2 percent to 21.1 billion DM from 19.4 billion DM, with home sales up 12.6 percent to 11.4 billion DM and exports up only 5.5 percent to 9.7 billion DM. The "drastically" higher value of the mark will slow down West German auto exports, be said, predicting that foreign sales in 1978 would not reach levels achieved between 1971 ach levels achieved between 1971

 d 1973.
 U.S. deliveries showed the sharpest rise, climbing 27.7 percent to 1.6 billion DM. The share of auto sales in domestic group turnover rose to 52 from 48.4 percent, while turnover in the commercial vehicle sector fell to 44.5 percent of sales from 48.2 percent.

While order inflow has continued strong for all automobile mod-els so far this year, 1978 production is not likely to match last year's due to the metal industry strike in March which shut production for three weeks. The strike cost the company about I billion DM in sales and a drop in output of 25,000 autos and 8,000 commercial vehicles. First-quarter domestic group sales fell 2.8 percent from a year earlier to 4.97 billion DM although world group turnover rose 0.5 percent to 6.08 billion DM.

The company plans a domestic investment program of more than 7 billion DM over the next five years, aimed primarily at expanding auto capacity. Group investment totaled 097 billion DM in 1977, up from 83 million DM, and is expected to imb to 1.2-to-1.3 billion DM this

Zaire Succeeds in Attracting Foreigners

By John Darnton

KINSHASA. Zaire. May 10 (NYT)-Zaire has succeeded in luring foreigners back to their former businesses, farms and entreprises after their expulsion in 1973.

In a move that runs against the grain of the rest of black Africa-where such countries as the relatively prosperous Ivory Coast and Nigeria are taking steps to ease foreign-ers out of positions of responsibility and economic control—President Mobutu Sese Seko has called upon all former foreign owners of private companies, stores, plantations and even small farms to come back in Zaire to resume control of their enterprises.

The policy, along with promises of special advantages to spur foreign investment such as easing rules on the transfer of dividends out of the country, is an abrupt about-face.
In November 1973, when copper prices were high and the economy was booming President Mobutu announced a program of placing all business, commerce and agricul-ture in the hands of Zairians.

Break Colonial Ties A year later the Government stepped inin nationalize some key industries, arguing that they were being mismanaged. At the time, the program was more sweeping than in most other African countries. It crystallized an urge to break the dependent ues with the former colonial overlords and the desire to create a sense of national unity by dropping the name Congo for Zaire and turning away from Western dress and cus-

Politically the move reaped great rewards for President Mobutu, but economically, it was a disaster since there was no educated, entrepreneurial class to keep the businesses running. Agriculture suffered. Stores ran out of stocks and closed. Transportation broke down. The nation's wealth, far from spreading to reach a great number, was concentrated in the hands of a rapacious elite.

When the government decided in 1975 to try to lure back the foreigners, it offered the original owners 40 percent of their former business. There were few takers. A year later the offer was increased to 60 percent, with the foreigner retaining full management control and able to choose a Zairian partner who would pay the owner the remaining 40

These inducements succeeded, so that now most of the major companies and larger palm-oil plantations are back in the hands of foreigners. Only some of the smaller, coffee-producing farms, whose owners refused to return, still belong to Zairians.

As in colonial days, most of the foreigners are Belgians. The number of Belgians in Zaire fell during the mid-70s to 18,000 from 30,000. Although there are no precise figures.

30,000. Although there are no precise figures, it is thought that there are close to 30,000 here again.

Some of the former owners and managers stayed on during the days of indigenous control, including the head of one large British-American produce company who is now back behind the desk in the director's office. "Things are beginning to come back, but it takes a long time," said Andre le Clercq. director of the large Jules van Lancker Ranching Company, which owns 46,000 heads of cattle in lower Zaire. "We can't get tires for our vehicles or fishmeal to feed our

Since he has not been able to find a Zairian who can pay for the 40 percent equity, he owns, for the moment, 100 percent. Mr. le Clercq observed that some of the businesses lared well under Zairian ownership. "It all depended on who took it over," he said. Some of them just drove up in a car. cleaned out the cash register and sold all the merchandise and took off. Others were very conscientious and kept the business going as

The railroad-river transport system, many say, has improved recently. The bead of the system that conveys goods down the river to the Atlantic is now a Belgian as is the head of the inland railroad company. "It's working too well," said a European ambassador.
"It's 80 percent unused because there is nothing to transport."

Zaire notwithstanding, the issue of expa-triate labor is extremely sensitive throughout black Africa. Diplomats in neighboring, left-leaning countries such as Angola some-times remark that President Mobutu. staggering under a debt burdern approaching $3 billion, has opened up his country to "neocolonialist exploitation." Local attitudes are harder to discern, but there is bound to be some negative fallout.

One economist from an international agency noted that "this injection of external assistance is belpful in the short run, but you cannot imagine the damage it does to the self-confidence of the Zairians."

Price Rises LONDON, May 11 (AP-DJ)-Britain can expect "a further spectacular improvement" in controlling its rate of inflation when the retail price index for April is pub-lished next week, Roy Hattersley, secretary of state for prices and consumer protection, said today. Britain's retail price index, based on 1974 equals 100, stood at 191.8

in March, up 0.6 percent from February and 9.1 percent from a year earlier. The index is expected to show a sharp improvement on a year-to-year comparison basis in April because a year earlier, measures taken in the country's annual budget produced a rise of 2.6 percentage points in retail prices during April. There were not any com-parable measures in the budget announced during April 1978. Mr. Hattersley said he could cony pre-tax profit declinand that "we will remain in singlefigure inflation throughout this year." Moreover, be said, "since I believe that the next pay round will be characterized by responsible settlements, I believe that the inflation success will continue into 1979." The 2-percentage-point increase in Britain's wholesale price index for raw materials and fuel in April is "clearly adverse, but only slightly so," he said, adding that "it won't change our forecast for the retail price index." He attributed the increase largely to the recent depreciation of sterling.

Mr. Hattersley also attacked the notions that high rates of taxation and a high level of government intervention in the economy are re-sponsible for the sluggish rate of growth of the British economy. British industry would have been better able to meet the expected up-turn in domestic demand this year had corporate managements been less pessimistic on the outlook for inflation, he maintained. He also contended that increased worker participation in corporate decision making would do more to improve the country's industrial performance than larger incentives

Level of '74 Trade Data Indicates Imports Fall Sharply

NEW YORK, May 11 (AP-DJ)-U.S. crude-oil production has topped nine million barrels a day for the first time in more than four years, according to the American Petroleum Institute.

It estimates that production in May should average slightly more than nine million barrels a day. The institute, which estimates each month's output on a daily average basis at the beginning of the month, also has raised its figures for April from its earlier estimate of 8.9 million barrels a day to nine million barrels.

Domestic oil production had been expected to rebound as Alaskan North Slope oil began moving through the trans-Alaska pipeline. The line opened at mid-1977 but flow has increased to nearly 1.2 million harrels a day, the line's capacity, only recently.

Domestic oil output has been as high as 10 million harrels a day, but just for the first week of 1971. On an annual basis, production peaked at 9.6 million harrels a day in 1970. Output slipped in 1971 to 9.5 oil-lion barrels a day.

The institute's latest weekly calculation shows that crude-oil imports fell sharply in the week ended last Friday, to 4.9 million harrels a day from 5.5 million in the preced-ing week and 6.7 million barrels in the year-earlier week. Although observers said weekly calculations could be distorted—by the late arrival of an oil tanker, for example il was the first time that crude-oil imports were indicated to be below five million barrels a day since May

Fed Hikes Its Discount Rate to 7%

WASHINGTON, May 11 1AP-DJ)—The Federal Reserve Board increased the discount rate today to 7 from 61: percent.

The fed said "the action was taken in recognition of increases that have already occurred in other short-term interest rates and will bring the discount rate into closer alignment with short-term rates

The increase, expected since short-term rates Have been climbing recently, was announced as markets opened for trading. The last time the Fed increased the rate was in January when it boosted it to 612 from 6 percent in a move to bolster the dollar. The rate is now the highest since the 714 percent in early 1975. Fed chairman William Miller said the "interest rate alignment" had "no market significance." He said that the Fed's recent tightening in the money markets has been necessary in view of the rapid growth in the money supply. After markets closed today, the New York Fed reported a large S4-billion increase in the money supply in the week ended Wednesday. Mr. Miller said the Fed has been placed in a "difficult position" where if acting alone it can either hold down money supply growth and risk a recession or let growth continue and unleash double-digit inflation three years hence. He urged steadily lower U.S. budget deficits on the grounds that that would "take the pressure off monetary policy."

We've been making the point, very successfully I think, that the Fed cannot no this job alone." He said he the administration recognizes the seriousness of the situation and said that statements by officials on concern over higher interest rates do not indicale any con-

(4) Equivalent of the Italian Line and and official rate of anchange

Italy succeeded lost year, thanks to the resilience of the economy and the initiative af the business sector, in eliminoting the externol trade deficit, exponding net invisible eornings (by over 50%) and oftracting foreign capital. A sizeoble surplus was shown in the country's balance of payments, while the reserve position wos cansiderably strengthened. The assistance of Italian banks, olbeit operating in on increasingly restrictive environment, was essential for the achievement of the encouraging results.

Deposits from dients and correspondents omounted for the Bonk of the end of 1977 to U.S. $21,326.4 million or 18% mare than a year earlier. Total deposits for the entire BNL-group amounted to U.S. $24,567.8 million (+17.3%).

Laans to customers and carrespondents increased by 18% for the Bank and by 16.6 % in the aggregate for the BNL-group.

Securities held in the Bank's own partfolio (including treasury bills) increased to U.S. $6,116.4 million and where about U.S. $1,600.8 millian more than a year earlier. The BNL-group balance sheet total amounted, at the end of 1977, to U.S. $48,564.0 million.

As a reserve for credit risks BNL set oside in 1977 U.S. $7B million and the Sections U.S. $26.6 million for a total of U.S. $104.6 million. The Bank's net profit for the year was U.S. $11..8 million and that af the group U.S. $28.5 million.

The Bank continued to devote particular ottentian to the assistance of business engaged in foreign trade and especially in companies awarded contracts from abroad, in line with Italy's efforts to promote exports. The Bank also actively aperated in this field within the framework of the recently adopted export-credit legislation.

The activities of BNL's foreign network experienced o further lively expansion in 1977. The cooperation within the ABECOR group of banks was continued, yielding additional positive results.

BANCO NACIONAL DE MEXICO OPENS LONDON OFFICE

Landing lights of the London finance and business world attended last night's reception at Claridge's given by Ban o Nacional de México to relebrate the nsentative effice in Lendon.

under which the institution is generally explained that Banames—the name under which the institution is generally known—e as lounded in 1884 and that at present its total assets amounted to U.S.$5.25bn. The bank operates some 500 offices inside Mexico and six abroad (New York,

Los Angeles, Tokyo, Paris, Frankfurt and Madridt, in addition to the one just imaginated in London. It is the principal shareholder of International Mexican Bank Ltd., London, which in its short life of five years has successfully premoted projects worth handereds of millions of dollars, almost invariably in cooperation with leading American and European banks. Mr. Busins said the opening of the London office, which is located at 29

foresham Street, was part and parcel of an overall Senames plan to develop its international activities, and that one of the forested objectives was to increase its interchank operations in order to ensure greater directification and contrib-ute still further to the secto-economic development of Mexico. ios introduced to his distinguished guests. Mesers, Pedro Gerisola, Executive Vice-President, international Area of Banamex, and Frank O. Willy, Vice-President, Finance and International Loans,

In charge of the new London office in Guillermo Offices Garda, another Vice-President of Bananess, who was born in Mexico City in 1940 and educated there and at Stanford University. After holding variets important pasts in the linaucial divisions of industrial companies, he worked for Bank of America

GEORGE ELIOT AND HER WORLD By Marghanita Laski. Charles Scribner's Sons. Illustrated. 128 pp. $9.95

Reviewed by Anatole Broyard

DON'T know how I have kept I my innocence all these years, but I was surprised to find that George Eliot, or Mary Ano Evans, as she was christened, shared with her common-law husband a "moral coarseness and emotional vulgarily." Surely not the author of "Middlemarch," "Adam Bede and "Silas Marner?" These phrases. which sound as if they were coined by some envious contemporary of Miss Evans, belong instead to Mar-ghanita Laski, author of "George Eliot and Her World."

I wooder about them. If the great George Eliot must be morally coarse and emotionally vulgar, I myself am coarse and vulgar enough to want to know all about it. I am so impressed with "Middlemarch" and "Adam "Middlemarch" and "Adam Bede"—if not with "Silas Marner" and "The Mill on the Floss"—that would welcome any sort of evidence of that great woman's char-

What did she eat and drink? How often did she wash? What were her pleasures? Her prejudices? Her indulgences? How did she express her often cited "sensuality" with her "lecherous" lover George Lewes? Where did she derive the rich humanity that audihly hums in her novels?

Miss Laski does not tell us. As close as she comes to revenling the intimate side of George Eliot, or Mary Ann Evans, is to tell us that she corresponded at length with a woman friend on the subject of how best to hold up one's drawers without constriction." Miss Evans favored broad straps, on the grounds that elastic stretched in the wash. When, at the age of 60, the widowed Miss Evans married a man more than 20 years younger, we learn that, during their honeymoon in Venice, he leapt into the Grand Canal and had to be pulled out, but we are given no reason for this dramade gesture. For most of "George Eliot and Her World," Miss Laski contents herself with what seems to me to be a rather grudging admiration of the novels and a rather enthusiastic harping on the author's physical ugliness.

It is remarkable how unadventurous most of Miss Evans's male contemporaries appear to have been. Herbert Spencer bluntly told Miss Evans that he was "deterred" by her lack of beauty, and Miss Laski makes her lifelong lover, Mr. Lewes, sound so indiscriminately crotic that we are almost led to suppose he never noticed her looks, Only the American writer. Bret Harte, was bold enough to say "I have seldom seen a grander face."

but the ominous Miss Laski quoles a contemporary opinion to the eflee! that although "illumined by happy phrases and by thrilling tenderness," her talk lacked humor. Defenders said that the author of some of the 19th century's greatest novels resembled both Savonarola and Dante. The second reference is understandable, if puzzling; the first remains mysterious, to me, at least.

The daughter of an aulo-didact, Mary Ann Evans was given a good lormal education, which led to an early ambition "to reconcile the philosophy of Locke and Kant." Miss Evans made her literary debut with book reviews and five essays, lour of them "worthily dull." according to Miss Laski, and the fifth "a rather nauscating fantasy." It was ool until she was 37 and living in sin with the "lecherous"

Mr. Lewes, that Miss Evans turned her hand to fiction with "Scenes of Clerical Life," which was well-received. Only Charles Dickens guessed that the pseudonymous author was a woman, although Mr. Lewes thought that the total absence of all field sports in her work was a dead giveaway.

After the success of "Adam Bede" a few years later, the secret could no longer be kept and Miss Evan's work was immediately reassessed by some critics in the light of her "scandalous liaison" with Mr. Lewes. One octagenarian writer condemned "Adam Bede" as "a minutes unhealthy analysis of leel-ings and impulse, to which the action of the will is made subordinate." Evan at the peak of her fame Miss Evans was generally visited only by men—a curious tribute for an "ogly" woman.

In Miss Laski's account, success did not become Miss Evans. She grew rather exalted and renounced fiction for three years in order to write poems, about which her hard-pressed publisher said, "They are truly good and have their meaning." When Miss Evans asked Tennyson whether he found useful, as she did, Professor Sylvester's "Laws for Verse Making," he re-plied "I can't understand that."

While I foolishly believed that Miss Evans would have been sufficiently pleased with her own achievements to discourage the identification of Dorothea in "Middlemarch" with herself, I suppose the temptation was irresistihle. Perhaps, as Miss Laski quotes half-a-dozen people as saying, Miss Evans was indeed conceited, mawkish, gushy, portentous, over-intense and artificial,

I don't know. I wasn't there. But I do know that it doesn't matter, next to her novels. Whatever else she was, she was also, most per-tinently, one of the century's best novelists. If we can't infer a theory of literature from her, we can read her books, which anyone in his right mind ought to prefer in any

U.S. Bar Assails Carter's Attack On Profession

WASHINGTON, May 11 (WP)—The American Bar Association struck hack at President Carter yesterday, accusing him of attack-ing the nation's lawyers in an effort to boost his flagging political image at home and abroad. In a major speech in Los Angeles last week, the President attacked lawyers in the United States and accused U.S. justice of being unfair to the poor.

At the same time, Warren Spann, the ABA president, said that Chief Justice Warren Burger, who himself has attacked the ability of the nation's trial lawyers in a series of well-publicized speeches, was an-noved that the White House had indicated he had anything to do with Mr. Carter's speech. Mr. Spann said the Chief Justice was "concerned" that the speech unfairly tarnished the nadon's lawyers.

"I have been authorized by Chief Institute Rustre to contain Justice Burger to say on his behalf that the ABA has cooperated fully in every innovation he has advocated since he became chief justice." Mr. Spann said at a Washington press conference. In Los Angeles. White House press secretary Jody Powell told re-porters that Carter had discussed his speech with Burger and Attorney General Griffin B. Bell, leaving the impression that they approved of the thrust of the president's remarks.

A player who wishes to lose can usually do so quite unobstrusively merely by playing routinely instead of putting forth his best efforts. Cunsider the diagrammed deal in which South reaches four spades. No game is desirable, but it is hard to stop short with such a weight of high cards. North might content high cards. North might content himself with three spades on the second round, and the partnership could then avoid the trap of playing for spades with four losers.

West leads the heart king, and the outine play for East is the deuce, since he does not have a doubleton. But if East is a good player and is concentrating, he will play the ten, because he wants his partner to each the ace. He can see that this will give the defense four tricks if the ace wius: and if not, nothing is lost: East can see that the defense has no chance of making a trick in the minor suits and so establishing the heart queen cannot help the neclarer. Now suppose that an expert

East, for some improbable and improper reason, would prefer to lose. He plays the heart deuce on the first trick, discouraging a continua-tion, and West shifts to a diamond. From his angle this could be essential: East could have the diamond king instead of the spade king, and the heart oueen would permit South to discard a diamond.

South gratefully plays three diamond winners, discarding his heart loser. Then he rulfs a heart and leads a trump to the ten. East wins and plays a club. Now South knows the trump position, and he stops and considers East's first trick mis-play, unworthy of an expert.

If South is sensitive to ethical considerations, he can redress the balance. Realizing what East is up to and not wishing to win with improper help, he can lead a trump from dummy and duck when East plays the nine; down one. plays the nine: down one.

Russians Defeat Team Canada

By Samuel Abt

PRAGUE Moy 11 11HT)-Helped by a controversial penalty, the Soviet Union defeated Team Canada, 5-1, at the world hockey championships here last night.

In the second game, Czechoslo-vakia defeated Sweden, 6-1, as both victors moved closer to their showdown game on Sunday. Czechoslovakia, which played less than impeccable hockey after building a 5-0 lead, is undefeated in eight mes, while the Russians have lost only to the Czechs. The Czechoslovakia-Sweden game was almost an anticlimax after the storms and furies of the first match, in which the Canadians were outplayed and beaten by factors other than the disputed penal-

They were already down, 2-0, on goals by Sergei Kapustin and Vic-tor Zhlukrov, the second on an interception of a sloppy clearing pass by the Canadian defense. The Ruswhen the storm broke. Rick Hampton and Kapustin were hartling along the boards for the puck when a high-sticking penalty was called against Kapustin and a slashing penalty against Hampton — for slashing Vasily Pervukhin, not Kapustin.

Hampton said later that he tried to pass the puck out and that his stick flew up accidentally and hit somebody — Pervukhin. He skated to his bench, where he was treated for a cut on the face.

Boris Mikhajlov, the Soviet captain, waved five fingers in the face of the referee, Raimo Sapponen, asking for a five-minute penalty on Hampton for causing injury, rather than the usual two minutes. The referees agreed.

The Philadelphia victory sent the series back to Washington's Landover, Md., court for a fifth game tomorrow night with the Bullets, who lead the best-of-seven set, 3-2.

The 76ers took an early 9-1 lead and never trailed as they combined a devastating fast hreak with an un-bending defense. While Erving and Collins provided the bulk of the offense, the 7-foot-1 Jones held Hayes, who had averaged 26.3 points through the first four games, to 12 points. In addition to his scoring, Erving guarded Washing-ton forward Boh Dandridge, who had scored at a 24.3 clip in the first four games. Dandridge got only 12 points last night.

The 76ers did not score for the first three minutes of the game, but after George McGinnis collected a free throw. Philadelphia raced to a 9-1 lead. The Bullets did not get their first field goal until Dan-dridge hit a hook shot with 8:47 to play in the period.

Charley Johnson, who scored 10 points in the second quarter, keyed Washington's comeback as they came within five at 37-32 with 5:34 remaining in the half. The Bullets outscored Philadelphia 20-8 in the first 61/2 minutes of the second perito 52-41 at the half.

Kings Name New Coach

KANSAS CITY, May 11 (AP)— Boldly predicting instant success. Cotton Fitzsimmons is returning to the midlands as bead coach of the Kansas City Kings.

Fitisimmons, 47, said that the Kings, who sagged to 31-51 this past season, already have the personnel to win in the National Basketball Association.

"I think what the Kings need more than anything is confidence." he said yesterday,
"We want to win and we want to win now. I didn't take the job to rebuild. I'm tired of rebuilding. This team will win next year." General manager Joe Axelson and majority owner Paul Rosen-berg sounded the same theme.

"Very frankly, we're tired of losing," said Rosenberg, "We think we can bring this town a winner."

Axelson said he interviewed at least seven applicants for the job made vacant by the January firing of Phil Johnson. "The question we tried to answer was who could get us most quickly on the winning track. We want to win now. And wherever Cotton has coached in the NBA, when he's had the horses, he's won." In 20 years as a head coach at the junior college, major college and professional level, Fizzimmons has logged a 581 winning percentage. He began by coaching Moberly Junior College in Missouri to a 224-58 mark in nine seasons, then moved to Kansas State for two years, guiding the Wildcats to the Big Eight championship in 1969-70. He became head coach of the Phoenix Suns in 1970 and also spent four years as head coach of the Atlanta Hawks, This season he compiled a 27-55 mark at Buffalo.

WARSAW (UPI)—Polish soccer manager Jacek Gmoch believes players improve with age.

That is wby his World Cup glittered for a few months but faded soon after the 1974 World

Cup. Gmocb said that Gorski had introduced too many young players into the national team. Gmoch's attitude is likely to result in Poland providing the oldest squad in Argentina. The nine survivors from Argentina. The nine survivors from the 1974 squad — Jan Tomaszewski, Atnoni Szymanowski, Waldysław Zmuda, Henryk Wieczorek, Kazimierz Deyba, Henryk Kasperczak, Grzegorz Nlato, Andrzej Szarmach and Marek Kusto—bring the average of the system of the start of the star age age of the squad to older than 27 and Włodzimier Lubanski, a 30-year-old striker with Belgian Club Lokeren, will boost the average Poland's record was modest last year with six victories, five defeats and two draws, but Gmoch achieved his major goal of steering his team to Argentina. The Poles qualified in style, dropping only one point in their six matches against Portugal, Denmark and Cyprus, scoring 17 goals and conceding only four.

Gmoch is aware of the shortcomings of his squad. We face the hardest joh in working ont a defense system," he said.

Gmoch uses a scientifie approach to training and his workouts are far from conventional. His stamina tests were so exhaustive that Szyma Nowski, a member of the national squad, had to be ordered to undergo them.
"Nobody has died during my tests yet," he said. Asked about his selection system, Gmoch replied: "My predecessor, Gorski, used to do it in his dreams, I have dreams, too, but I am guided by good knowledge of the soccer subject." This is the eighth in a series.)

Night Sounds By Russell Bitker

NEW YORK—The other night a window blew out of the 42-story apartment building across the street and made a mess of a car our street usually has more waiting parked in front of our house. It happened right at dinner time and we would have paid it no heed if Winokur had not been visiting. Winokur comes from Iowa and urban life is an endless astonishment to him. He had a fork loaded with pota-toes when the window struck. "What's that?" he "Potatoes, "somebody said.

"It sounds like there's been a ter-

Baker rible accident out in the street," he said. As a New Yorker, I am very canny ahout these sounds. A remote recess of the brain hears them and silently catalogs them without alarming me to take action unless action is truly indicated. Thus, when a sound like a munitions plant exploding interrupts the din-ner conversation, the conscious part of my brain does not hear it because that remote brain recess has instantly analyzed it as the amplified echo of a tire blowout on the 59th Street bridge or a hus falling into a pothole.

The sound that had alarmed Winokur had not interested me in the least, because my brain's noise analyzer had instantly cataloged it as the sound of a parked car being bombed at the curb, And so I urged Winokur to relax. "Somebody probably just bombed a parked car." I said. "Eat your potatoes."

This was a mistake. In lowa the bombing of parked cars is apparently a novelty. He went to the window. "It looks bad," he said, "And right in front of the house,"

So?" I said, "They didn't bomb the house, did they?"

Out he went to inspect. We dropped napkins and followed, After all, he was a guest. When we saw the heavy shards of thick window glass covering street and sidewalk, we laughed.

"That bombed car must have had bulletproof glass," Winokur said. He knew about coro and bogs, but glass was over his head. "Look we urged him. He did and chausseurs than lampposts. And far into the night sky rose acres of glass.

"It was just The Emperor shedding another window," I explained.
Winokur was not to be pacified.
The spectacle of the battered car had unnerved him. "Suppose I'd been getting out of that car." he

We got him back inside after pointing out that one of the cultural advantages of living in New York was the opportunity to be wiped out by a window falling from a 42-story building. "Are you tell-ing me that building drops windows around here on a full-time basis?" he asked.

Of course it doesn't, and I told him so. In fact, it hadn't dropped any near our house that I'd beard since 4 o'clock one morning a year or so ago. I almost woke up, but my noise analyzer told me it was merely two big trucks colliding in front of the house, so I went back to deep sleep until a few minutes later I heard the same noise repeated.

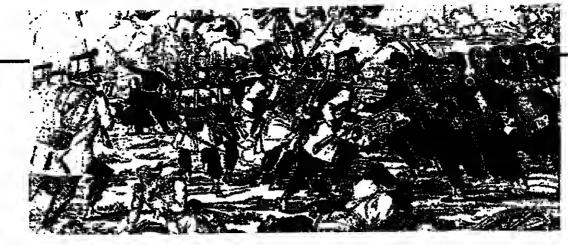

"Did you get out of bed the sec-ond time?" Winokur asked. "Of course not,", I said. "I figured it was just two more trucks colliding. Next morning I went down and the street was covered with glass and I realized it was just The Emperor dropping a couple of windows. Have some desseri."

"The excitement of urban living." I replied, "is never knowing what's going to happen next."
"Maybe I should stay at a botel," said Winokur.

We suggested backgammon in stead and cleaned out his waller Not being a New Yorker, he couldn't compute odds, which were forbiddingly high against the prob-ability of two windows dropping in on us during the same night. Afterward, we put him to bed on the ground floor, went upstairs and turned in Some policemen came and coade a noise examining the battered car, and then drove off to file another report, and then a bus fell in a pothole with a terrifying crash which I didn't bear because I was preoccupied with worry about being caught in a tornado next month when I have to go to Kansas City.

It All Started at the Battle of Solferino

By Calla Corner

GENEVA (1HT)—The first man to receive the Nobel Peace Prize, Hann Dunant, the Genevan who founded the Red Cross, was born on May 8, 1828. Geneva and the Red Cross are celebrating his 150th birthday this month with a series of conferences, exhibitions and a sound-and-light show in the courtyard of the Hotel de Ville

The Red Cross is using the occasion of its founder's birth to illustrate the organization's present-day activities and to promote its institutions, all of which remain very similar to the original ideals of Henri Dunant when he established the Red Cross in 1865.

It was during the Battle of Solferino in northern Italy on him 24, 1850 about northero Italy on June 24, 1859, that Dunant began to formulate his ideas for a neutral force to belp the wounded.

Dunant went to Italy intending to ask Napoleon Ill's assistance in a wheat-grow-ing venture for feeding the Algerian popula-tion. The 38-year-old idealist, son of a judge who befriended orphans and a devoutly religious mother, found himself on the burning Lombardy plain surrounded by 40,000 wounded and dying French, Austrians and Italians. His reaction to the horrors of war was to volunteer his services and do what be could for the victims of the battle.

Enlisted Aid

For eight days he worked night and day, enlisting the belp of all those willing and able in neighboring villages, to transport the wounded, regardless of their nationalities, to shelter, care for their wounds and provide solace. He implored young girls to comfort the soldiers and bring them water, and urged young boys to make themselves useful. Dunant did not realize at the time that he was setting in motion the future Red Cross, training would-be Florence Nightingales and Junior Red Cross members.

When he returned to Geneva, he wrote an account of his actions, "A Memory of Solferino," which he published at his own expense. The book contained his proposals for the founding of an international body for the relief of battle wounded and a convention to protect them.

He sent copies to all his friends, influential Swiss and the ruling heads of Europe. Four Genevans, Gustave Moynier, a judge, doctors Louis Appia and Theodore Maunoir and the commanding general of the Swiss Army, General Dufour, railied to the cause and joined Dunant in forming the Commit-

With the encouragement of 13 European with the encouragement of 13 European sovereigns, including Victor Emmanuele of Italy, Leopold I of Belgium, William I of Prussia, Queen Christina of Spain and Queen Sophia of the Netherlands, Dunant launched himself on a six-week promotional tour of the capitals of Europe.

The result was a conference in Geneva in October, 1863, with 14 nations represented. A committee was formed to help the wounded of the signing nations under a banner of neutrality. The banner chosen was a red cross on a white backround—an easily recognizable symbol which honored the country in which the Red Cross was founded. In response to Moslem wishes, a red crescent and a red lion and sun have since been adopted as official Red Cross symbols in some areas of the world.

General Conference

Six months after the founding of the Red Cross, a general conference was beld in Paris and Dunant proposed to the assembly that the same treatment that had been established for the wounded be extended to prisoners of war. But it wasn't until 1929 that his proposal was adopted by the Red Cross. Henri Dunant did not live to see the extension of his original ideas, which are now fundamental to the Red Cross organization. Nor did be imagine that one day the Red cross would have 2.3 million members in 125 nations, that it would come to the aid, approximately every 20 days, of victims of natural disasters and that would keep a card file on 50 million missing or imprisoned per-

Absorbed with the establishment of the Red Cross, Dunant neglected his business affairs and he found himself suddenly bankrupt. His friend and associate, Gustave Moynier, demanded his expulsion from the Geneva committee. Dunant left Geneva in 1867, angry and embittered, never to return.

The founder of the Red Cross continued unofficially to plead its cause and put forth innovative suggestions. Dunant is credited with proposing a permanent assembly of nations, a permanent high court of international arbitration, an international body for the reform of working conditions and security zones for civilian populations.

Admitted to Clinic

For the next 12 years Dunant drifted around Europe, often with little to eat and no place to stay. In 1892, sick and disillusioned, he was admitted to a small clinic in Heiden in the Swiss canton of Appenzell. In this shelter be began to write his memoirs.

In 1895, a Swiss journalist who was visiting the clinic discovered Dunant there and wrote an article about the forgotten founder of the Red Cross. Immediately, world attention was focused upon Dunant, He was awarded the prestigious peace prize, the Prix Binet-Fendt. Two years later, 1,000 doctors at a conference in Moscow awarded him the Prix de Moscow, and in 1901 he shared the first Nobel Prize for Peace with the French pacifist, Frederic Passy. Henri Dunant died in 1910 in Heiden at the age of 82. In his will he provided for a bed to be made permanently available to the sick and poor in the clinic that had been his home for the last 18 years of his life.
